

Chapter
FIVE

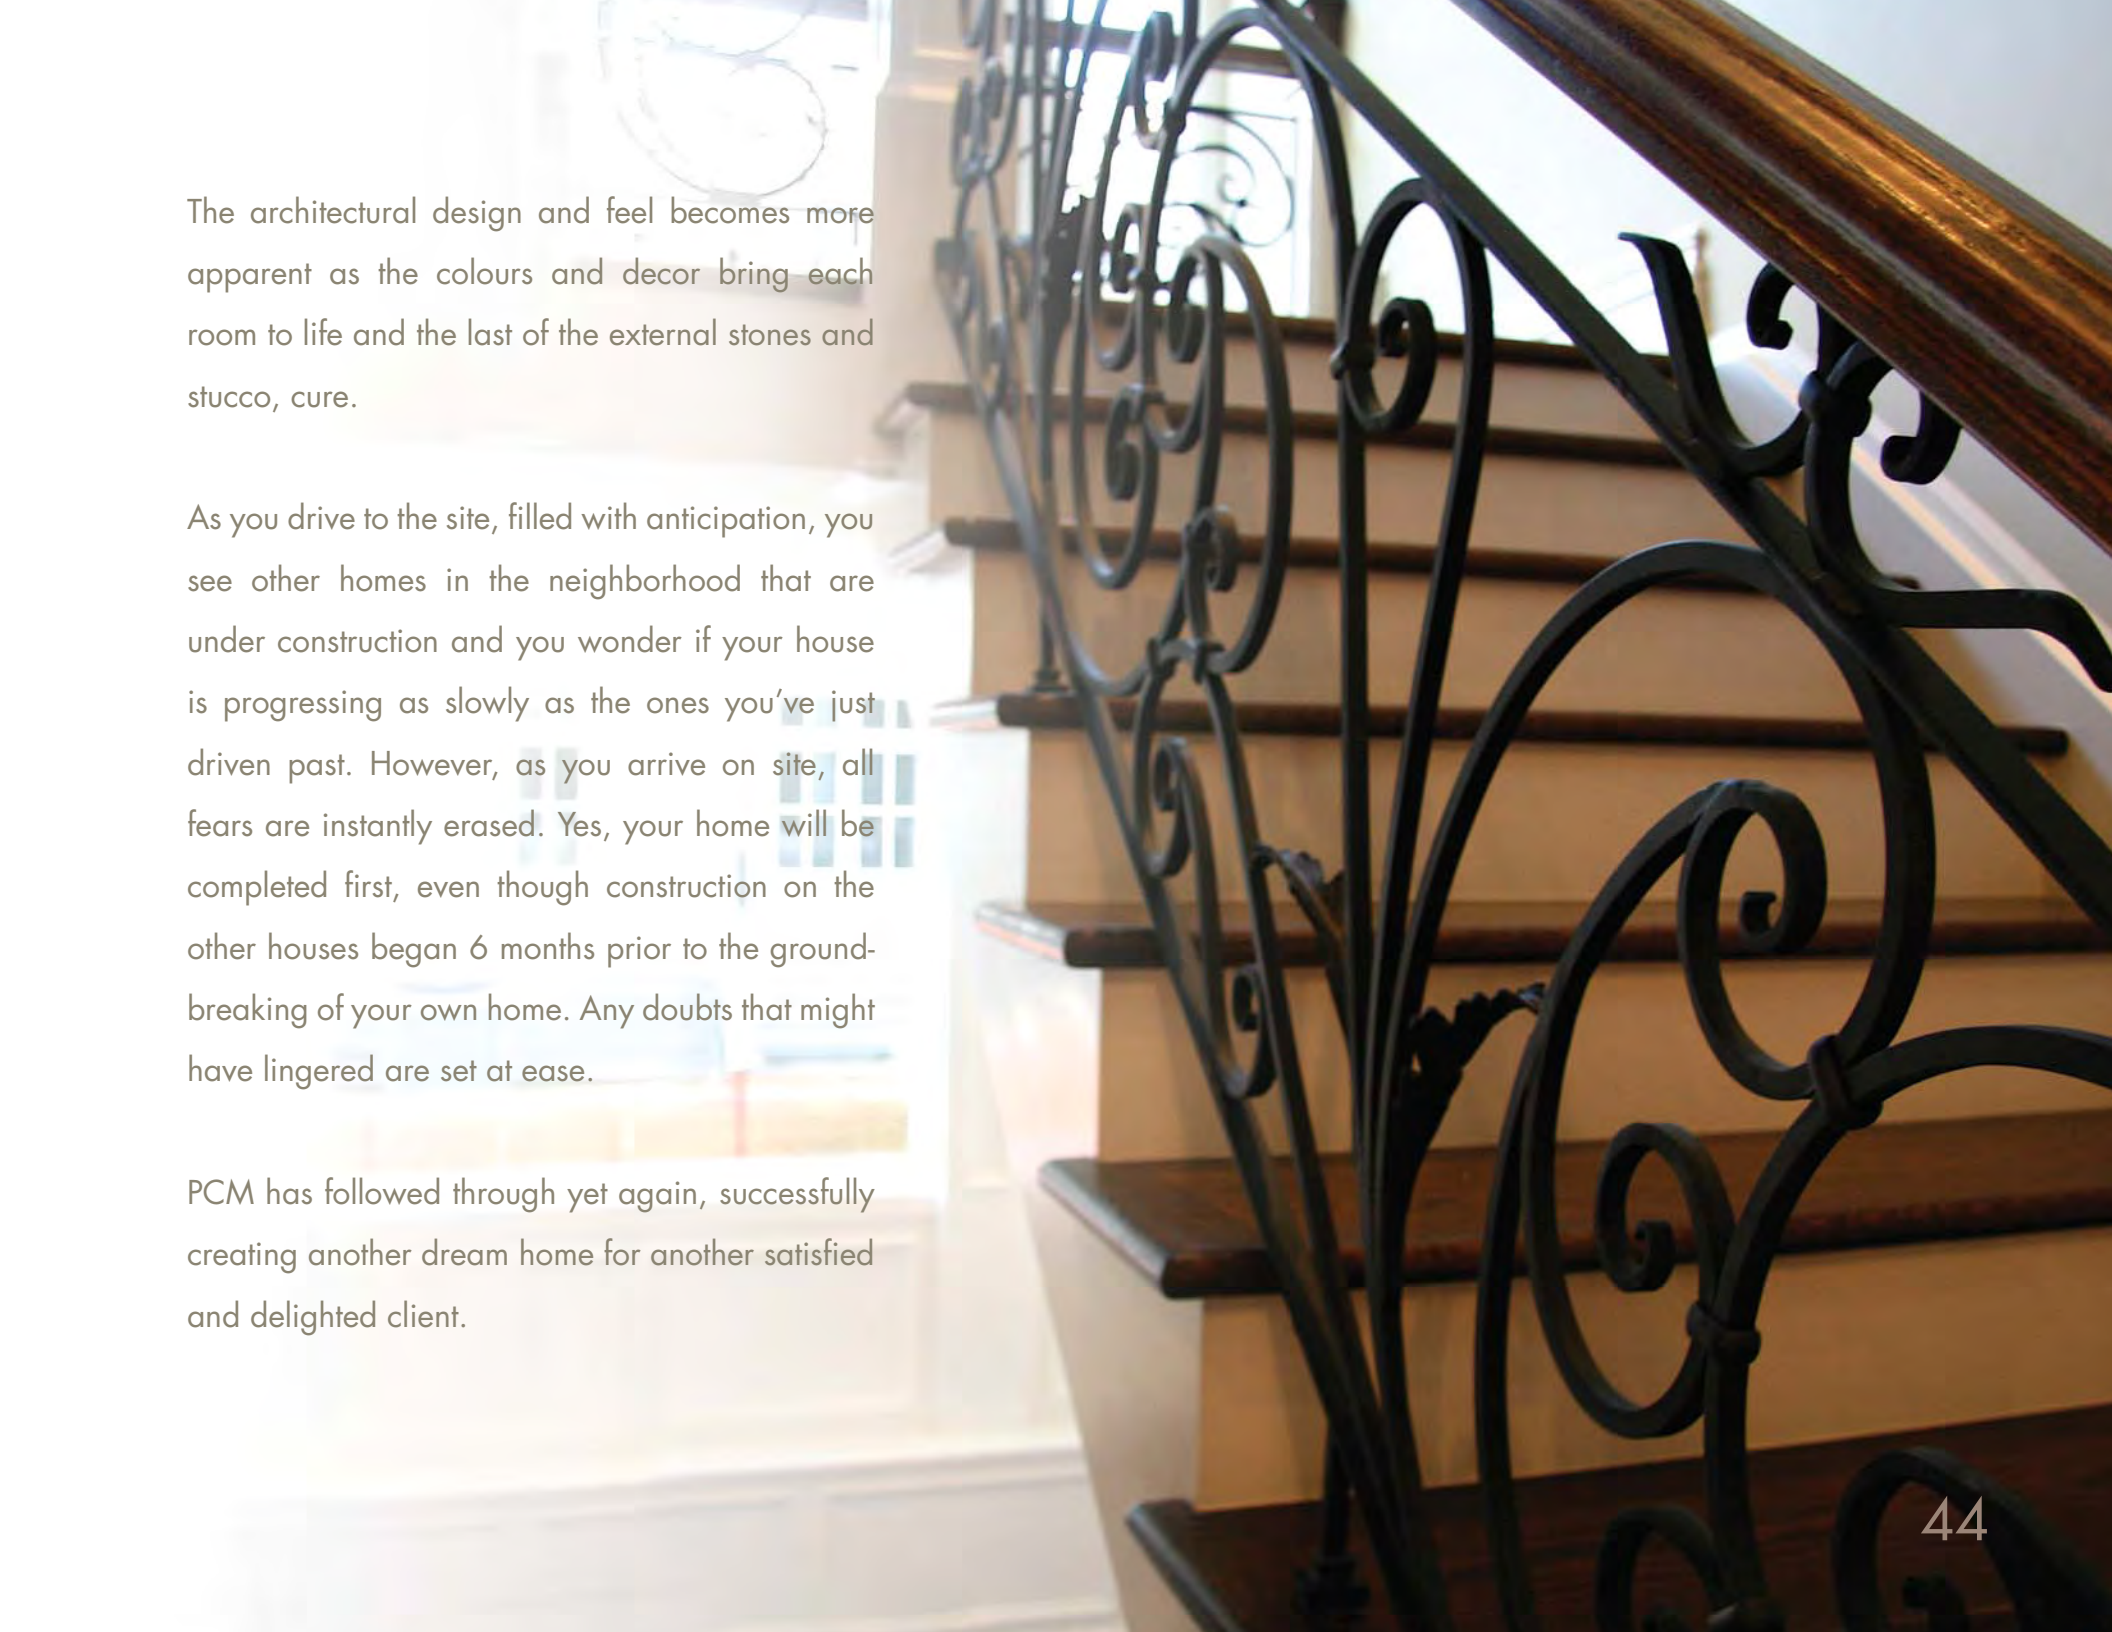

EXTERIOR AND INTERIOR FINISH

PCM's meticulous planning insures that every expectation is met. Six to eight weeks into the project, the insulation has been installed, the municipal inspection has been passed, the drywall and taping is nearing an end and the content hum of busy workers hangs in the air. With the taping complete, a coat of primer is applied to the walls and ceilings and plaster crown moldings are installed.

In a mere ten days the walls are finished and the floors are set in place. As one crew moves out, the next moves in, and another is right behind. Materials are delivered every morning: granite tiles, hardwood flooring, crown molding and more. Doing things the PCM way results in astonishing, daily progress.

The cabinets and trim arrive and the kitchen begins to take form. The previously selected appliances and custom marble countertops are delivered on site, while the scent of paint lingers in the air.

The architectural design and feel becomes more apparent as the colours and decor bring each room to life and the last of the external stones and stucco, cure.

As you drive to the site, filled with anticipation, you see other homes in the neighborhood that are under construction and you wonder if your house is progressing as slowly as the ones you've just driven past. However, as you arrive on site, all fears are instantly erased. Yes, your home will be completed first, even though construction on the other houses began 6 months prior to the ground-breaking of your own home. Any doubts that might have lingered are set at ease.

PCM has followed through yet again, successfully creating another dream home for another satisfied and delighted client.